The Assassination of Lincoln. The following vivid description of the scenes at Ford's Theatre, at the time of his assassination, from a forthcoming book by Walt. Whitman, has never before been published:

The day, April 14, 1865, seems to have been a pleasant one throughout the whole land - the moral atmosphere pleasant, too-the long storm so dark, so fratricidal, fult of blood and doubt and gloom, over and ended at last by the sunrise of such an absolute national victory, and lated beneath the apple tree of Appomattox. The other armies, the flanges of the revolt, swiftly followed.

And could it really be, then? Out of all the affairs of this world of woe and passion, of failure and disorder and dismay, was there really come the confirmed, unerring sign of plan, like But I must not dwell on accessories. The deed hastens. The popular alternoon paper, the little Evening Star, had spattered all over was fond of the theatre. I have myself seen him there several times. I remember thinking how funny it was that be, in some respects, the leading actor in the greatest and stormiest drama known to real history's stage, through centuries, should sit there and be so completely interested and absorbed in those human jackstraws, moving about with their silly little gestures, foreign spirit, and flatulent text.) So the day, as I say, was propinious. Early herbage, early flowers, were out. (I remember where I was stopping at the time, the season being advanced, there were many lilacs in full bleom. By one of those caprices that enter and give tinge to events without being at all a part of them, I find myself always reminded of odor of these blossoms. It never fails.)

On this occasion the theater was crowded, many ladies in rich and gay costumes, officers in their uniforms, many well-known cit; zens, young folks, the usual clusters of gaslights, the usual magnetism of so many p ople, cheerful with perfumes, music of violins and flutes-(and over all, and saturating all that vast. vague wonder, Victory, the Nation's Victory, the triumph of the Union, filling the air, the thought, the sense, with exhibaration more than all perfumes.) The President came betimes, and, with his wife, witnessed the play from the large stage boxes of the second tier, two thrown into one, and profusely draped with the national flag. The acts and seenes of the piece-one of those singularly withese compositions which have at least the merit of giving entire relief to an audience engaged in mental action or business excitements and cares during the day, as it makes not the slightest call on either the moral, emotional, esthetic, or spiritual nature -a piece ("Our American Cousin") in which among other characters, so called, a Yankee. certainly so called, a Yankee, certainly such a one as was never seen, or the least like it ever seen in North America, is introduced in England, with a varied fol-de-rol of talk, plot, scenery, and such phantasmagoria as goes to make up a modern popular drama-had progressed perhaps a couple of its acts, when in the midst of this comedy, or tragedy, or nonsuch, or whatever it is to be called, and to offset it or finish it out, as if in nature's and the great muse's mockery of these poor mimes, comes interpolated that scene, not really or exactly to be described at all (for on the many hundreds who were there it seems to this hour to have left little but a passing blur, a dream, a blotch)-and yet partially to be described as I now proceed to give it. There is a scene in the play representing a modern parlor, in which two unprecedented English ladies are informed by the unprecedented and impossible Yankee that he is not a man of fortune, and therefore undesirable for marriage catching purposes; after which, the comments being finished, the dramatic trio make exit, leaving the stage clear for a moment. There was a pause, a hush as it were. At this period came the murder of Abraham lateoln. Great as that was, with all its manifold train circling around it, and stretching into the future for many a century, in politics, his tory, art, etc., of the New World, in point of fact the main thing, the actual murder, transbired with the quiet and simplicity of any com monest occurrence—the bursting of a pod or bud in the growth of vegetation, for instance. Through the general hum following the stage pause, with the change of positions, etc., came the mufiled sound of a pistol shot, which not one hundredth part of the audience heard at the time-and yet a moment's hush-somehew, surely a vague, startled thrill-and then, through the ornamented, draperied, starred and striped space-way of the President's box, a sudden figure, a man raises himself with hands and feet, stands a mement on the rail log, leaps below to the stage, (a distance of perhaps fourteen or fifteen feet,) falls out of losition, catching his boot-heel in the copious drapery, (the American flag,) falls on one kuee, quickly recovers himseli, rises as if nothing had happened, (he really sprains his his ankle, but unfelt then) -and so the figure, Booth, the murderer, dressed in piain black broadcloth, bare-headed, with a full head of glossy, taven hair, and his eyes, like some mad animals's flashing with light and resolution, yet with a certain strange calmness, holds aloft in one hand a large knife—walks along not much back from the footlights-turns fully toward the audience, his face of statues-que beauty, lit by those basilisk eyes, hishing with desperation, perhaps insanity aunches out in a firm and steady voice the Nords. Sic semper tyrannis - and then walks with neither slow nor very rapid pace diagonby across to the back of the stage, and disapen rehearsed, in blank, by Booth, before-A moment's hush, incredulous-a screamof murder—Mrs. Lincoln leaning out and Chow Chow, at DAVY & HARMON'S, the box, with ashy cheeks and lips, with inautary ery, pointing to the retreating figure, He has killed the President !" And still a moment's strange incredulous suspense—and then the cluge!—then that mixture of herea. then the deluge!—then that mixture of horror, prices. oises, uncortainty—(the sound, somewhere pars. (Had not all this terrible scene—making the mimic ones preposterous—had it not all back, of a horse's hoofs clattering with speed) -the people burst through chairs and railings. and break them up—that noise adds to the queernessel the scene—there is inextricable confusion and terror-women faint-quite feeble persons tall, and are trampled on-many cries ot agony are heard-the broad stage suddenly fills to suffocation with a dense and motley crowd, like some horrible carnival -the audience rush generally upon it-at least the strong men do—the actors and actresses are all there in their play costumes and painted faces, with mortal fright showing through the rouge, some

Also of the LIVERPOOL & LONDON & GLOBE IN SURANCE COMPANY. trembling-some in tears-the screams and calls, confused talk-redoubled, trebled - two or three manage to pass up water from the stage to the President's box—others try to clamber up—etc., etc., etc.

In the midst of all this the soldiers of the President's Guard; with others, suddenly drawn to the scene, burst in-some 200 altogether-they storm the house, through all the tiers, especially the upper ones, inflamed with fury, literally charging the audience with fixed bayonets, muskets and pistols, shouting, "Clear out! clear out! - you sons of b-!" Such the wild scene, or suggestion of it rather, inside the play house that night.

Outside, too, in the atmosphere of shock and craze, crowds of people filled with frenzy, ready to seize any outlet for it, came near committing murder several times on innocent individuals. One such case was especially exciting. The utter breaking down of secessionism-we al- infuriated crowd, through some chance, got most doubted our own senses! Lee had capitu- started against one man, either for words he uttered, or perhaps without any cause at all, and were proceeding at once to actually hang him on a neighboring lamp-post, when he was rescued by a few heroic policemen, who placed him in their midst and fought their way slowly and amid great peril toward the station house. It was a fitting episode of the whole affair. The a shaft of pure light, of rightful rule—of God?

But I must not dwell on accessories. The night, the yells, the pale faces, many frightened people trying in vain to extricate themselves -the attacked man not yet freed from the its third page, divided among the advertise- jaws of death, looking like a corpse-the silent, ments in a sensational manner in a bundred resolute half dozen policemen, with no weapon different places: "The President and his lady will be at the theatre this evening." (Lincoin through all those eddying swarms—made indeed a fitting side scene to the grand tragedy of the murder. They gained the station house with the unprotected man, whom they placed in security for the night, and discharged him in the morning.

And in the midst of that night pandemonium of senseless bate, infuriated soldiers, the audience, and the crowd-the stage, and all its actors and actresses, its paint pots, spangles, and gas lights-the life blood from those veins. the best and sweetest of the land, drips slowly down, and death's ooze already begins its little bubbles on the lips.

Such, hurriedly sketched, were the accompaniments of the death of President Lincoln. So suddenly, and in murder and horror nusurthe great tragedy of that day by the sight and | passed, he was taken from us. But his death was painless.

EDGER'S FLUID (RED), THE UNI VERSAL DISINFECTANT. (Perman-ganate of Soda.) It is the only true disinfectant known, all other preparations sold for this pur-pose being merely deodorizers (or articles which possess the property of overpowering unpleasant smells by their own pungent and often disagreeabic and dangerous qualities.) It is particularly adapted for disinfecting sick rooms in cases of typhus fever, small pox, cholera, scarlet fever, diarrices, and all contagious diseases, and for puritying rooms in which there are dead bodies, removing at once all unpleasant smells, and destroying effectually any latent germs of dis-case. By placing the diluted fluid in dishes or basins, about bed chambers, school rooms, work shops, hospital wards, &c., it keeps the air in a perfect state of purity. For stables, slaughter houses, butchers' shops, dairies, cellars, &c., it is invaluable, keeping them in a perfectly wholesome state, by merely sprinkling the di-inted fluid over the floors and walls. It keeps dust bins, water closets, drains, urinals, &c., sweet and wholesome, by using once or twice a day. For sale by JANNEY & CO.,
